Mehmet Bahar, Editor-in-Chief

Abant Izzet Baysal University, Bolu, Turkey

Dear Colleagues,

I am gladly serving as the editor-in-chief of this journal since November 2008. It has been really a lot of hard work but it was worth every moment of it.

Although the IJESE is a young journal, published since 2006, it has been taken attentions by many subject area specialists who are well known in environmental and science education throughout the world. The number of articles sent to the IJESE is dramatically increasing. It is our pleasure to receive articles from many subject area specialists in America, Europe, Australia, Far-East, Middle East, and Africa and to get attention of many researchers. Hence, the IJESE is indexed and/or abstracted in many well known databases.

We hope that interests to the IJESE will continue to increase and the IJESE journal will play major role in the field of environmental and science education in the new future. We sincerely thank all of our contributions as paper authors, reviewers and editorial board members for their valuable contributions.
